Introducing the VOX®Reception™ Desk.
Scalable concepts for an unlimited range of esthetic possibilities.
Design: Mark Müller

Toronto June 12, 2006 - Today’s reception environment needs a systems approach to the design for reception-style desks. Flexible design concepts under one product introduction are required to meet needs related to corporate reception, library, reference and information style desks. A “kit of parts” concept of design and manufacturing needs to offer the designer a wealth of components and tools to resolve any client requirement.

The Vox®Reception™ Desk addresses this emerging need. It is the most comprehensive product on the market for corporate reception, library, reference, and information style desks. It has unprecedented functionality with a range of esthetic possibilities that can be constructed to any scale.

A series of components in a range of sizes can be joined together in an unlimited number of configurations for unique appearances with clean edges and contrasting surfaces. Carefully engineered height adjustable and mobile storage elements add to the range of design possibilities. These elements can be expanded in the future as needs change. All materials can be easily separated for reuse or recycling. Aluminum is the principal material and is manufactured from 100% re-melt. MDF tops and modesty panels are manufactured from 100% post industrial waste.
